Conversion Between Part-Time and Full-Time J.D. Programs
(For J.D. students who enter in or after Fall 2015)

Students in the full-time program may apply for a one-time conversion to the part-time program only after 28 credits have been attempted and before the start of their second Spring semester. Once students elect to convert to the part-time program, they are not permitted to convert back to full-time.

Students in the part-time program may apply for a one-time conversion to the full-time program after 28 credits have been attempted. Once students elect to convert to the full-time program, they are not permitted to convert back to part-time.

Exception: For purposes of the Autumn in London Program, students will be treated as full-time. This is not considered a student-elected conversion as the students will convert back to part-time once the program is completed. However, if students request to remain full-time, that will qualify as the one-time conversion.

Requests to convert from one program to the other (full-time to part-time or part-time to full-time) will be considered by the Associate Dean for Academic Affairs. In making such a determination, the Associate Dean for Academic Affairs may consider factors that include but are not limited to the following: Further Required Curriculum, Academic Probation; student's cumulative grade point average; trend in the student's semester averages; documented medical reasons; the student's other commitments, such as co-curricular and extra-curricular activities; and other factors indicative of the student's ability to succeed academically.

The Associate Dean for Academic Affairs may make exceptions to these restrictions under extraordinary circumstances.
